Johnny 'Joey' Jones

Staff Sergeant (Ret.) U.S. Marine Corps

Combat-wounded Staff Sergeant (Ret.) Johnny "Joey" Jones turned a traumatic, life-changing disability into a personal mission to improve the lives of all veterans and share the perspective and gratitude he found in his recovery.

Jones enlisted in the Marine Corps after high school. During his eight years of service, he worked as an Explosive Ordnance Disposal (bomb) Technician, deploying to both Iraq and Afghanistan on separate tours. During his last deployment to Afghanistan he stepped on and initiated an IED, resulting in the loss of both of his legs and severe damage to his arms. He recovered at Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Washington D.C.

Determined to make the road to recovery easier for his fellow wounded veterans, Jones founded a peer visit program at Walter Reed. After regaining full physical independence, just 10 months after his injury, Jones enrolled at Georgetown University.

After losing his childhood best friend to PTSD-related suicide, Jones decided to make veterans' issues a key part his professional work. He has shared his experiences regarding the challenges facing active duty and retired service members and he remains active as an advocate on veteran and military issues.

Jones' deployment, injury and subsequent recovery were documented on ABC Nightline and CBS Evening News. His family's colorful past as moonshiners and race car drivers was featured in the premiere episode of the hit series "Religion of Sports". On the big screen, Jones has a speaking role in the Academy Award-winning film "Lincoln," he appeared in the independent film, "Range 15" and was a technical advisor for the independent film "Bad Hurt."

Jones' first book, "Unbroken Bonds of Battle" offers deep insight into the relationships and events that forged Jones' outlook on life. Prior to joining FOX News, Jones helped design and pilot a Warrior Week military transition program as the senior advisor to military programming at Zac Brown's Camp Southern Ground.
